

A feasibility study into Agricultural Development and Tourism related alternatives in the Hessequa region, Southern Cape

It is of paramount importance to unlock the development potential in all the rural areas of South Africa to ensure a wealthy rural, provincial and national economy. The Hessequa region is no exception. Agriculture and tourism are traditionally the backbone of the local economy. However, many of the residents have not been able to fully unlock the potential of the area. The objective with this project is to develop a plan to unlock the potential through value adding of existing products and the production of new high value products (including biomass production).