

Development & Design of a Transformation baseline tool

The objective was to develop and design an effective measurement tool to serve as a baseline assessment of the efficacy of agricultural transformation (including both primary and secondary producers) in the province. This transformation “yardstick” is premised on contemporary academic theory and the prevailing legislative framework and policy guidelines, amongst others, applicable to projects of this nature.